

Canada's Most Wanted:

An Innocent HUMINT/OSINT Report

Exposing Systemic Injustice and Transphobic Discrimination in the Fight for a Voided and Nullified Corrupt Record

By Marie Seshat Landry of Marie Landry's Spy Shop (www.marielandryspyshop.com)

March 31, 2025

Abstract

This report meticulously documents the systemic injustices and transphobic discrimination endured by Marie Seshat Landry over seven years, originating from false allegations in 2016 that were erroneously recorded as convictions due to an administrative error [1-4]. Despite the charges being withdrawn in court, this foundational error, compounded by alleged mishandling and discriminatory practices by the RCMP and other entities, has resulted in persistent harassment, misrepresentation, and the denial of fundamental rights [1-4]. Marie Landry asserts her complete innocence of all charges from 2016 to 2023 [5, 6], contending that subsequent charges arose directly from her acts of self-defence under duress, falsely labelled as criminal offences due to the initial, unrectified injustice [5, 6]. This report aims to lay bare all documented details, supporting the demand for Marie Landry's entire criminal record to be voided and nulled, and for those responsible to be held accountable [1-4].

1 The Corrupted Foundation: The 2016 False Allegations and the Disputed Administrative Error

In 2016, Marie Landry was wrongly accused of an indecent act (Case #33094001) [5, 6]. These charges were withdrawn in court on October 31, 2016 [5, 6]. However, this crucial information was never accurately reflected in official records [1-4]. The origin of this failure is contested:

- The RCMP/CRCC initially stated the mistake was made by a city employee [1-4].
- However, the City of Moncton, following an internal investigation, informed Marie Landry that the error was made by a Public Service employee of the Federal Government, explicitly stating it was not a City employee [7].
- RCMP Corporal Yanick Soucy also acknowledged a mistake made by one of their Public Service Employees (PSE) in 2016 [Conversation History], aligning with the City of Moncton's findings [7].

This grave administrative error, regardless of the precise entity responsible within the federal public service, had devastating consequences for Marie Landry's life, reputation, and well-being [1-4].

2 RCMP Mishandling, Systemic Transphobia, and Failure to Protect

Despite the withdrawal of charges being a matter of public record, the RCMP allegedly continued to treat Marie Landry as if she had been convicted [1-4]. Marie Landry believes this sustained misrepresentation is deeply rooted in systemic transphobia and discrimination within the RCMP [5, 6, 8-16]. She reports experiencing persistent misgendering by RCMP officers and alleges that her depositions were consistently refused or disregarded from 2016 to 2023 [5, 6]. This disregard allegedly violates her rights protected under Bill C-16 of 2017 [5, 6, 17], which adds gender identity and expression to the list of prohibited grounds of discrimination.

RCMP Constable Gabriel Gallant is specifically accused of harassing Marie Landry shortly after court, falsely stating that she had taken a deal that included all convictions, despite the withdrawals [1-4]. Marie Landry believes Gallant, along with RCMP Informant Tania Mallet, actively participated in spreading disinformation about her case, even telling witnesses that she had been successfully convicted [1-4]. These individuals are identified as potential false witnesses in the CHRC case (2023-0331) [1-4]. This false information allegedly affected Marie Landry's reputation and good standing with the police and the community. Between 2016 and 2019, she claims to have been repeatedly presented in court cases as a man with mental disorders, guilty of indecent acts and violence, based on this misinformation [1-4]. Her medical records also remain deeply affected by this initial error and subsequent transphobia [5, 6, 8-15].

Marie Landry's security was allegedly treated as a joke by Codiac RCMP members who refused her depositions [1-4]. This included her reports of a new far-right white supremacist neo-nazi group in Moncton sending her Nazi imagery, swastikas, and death threats for being a transgender person and a liberal [1-4]. These threats, including language of insurrection and threats against Prime Minister Trudeau, were allegedly not taken seriously or investigated [1-4]. This demonstrates a potential failure to protect Marie Landry from known threats. Rumours of non-existent video evidence of the alleged indecent act were circulated, further contributing to the damaging narrative [1-4].

3 Self-Defence Under Duress: The Consequence of Institutional Failure

Marie Landry unequivocally declares her innocence in all New Brunswick files from 2016 to 2023 [5, 6]. She states that numerous charges, including mischiefs, simple assaults, and a joyride, were imposed on her under duress [5, 6]. She maintains that her actions were in self-defence over seven years due to the RCMP's refusal to address transphobic bullies and the ongoing repercussions of the false accusations in court case #33094001 [5, 6]. This also allegedly violates Article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) [5, 6, 10, 13], which protects the right to life, liberty, and security of person.

Feeling unable to rely on law enforcement for protection, Marie Landry claims her actions, now labelled as criminal, were necessary for her safety and security under extreme pressure. She specifically mentions actions related to obstruction of license plates with plastic covers between 2016 and 2019, stating these were taken in a context of self-defence and security under duress [1-6, 18, 19]. While acknowledging that such obstruction may contravene the NB Motor Vehicle Act Laws [5, 6, 10, 13], she requests consideration of the circumstances [1-6, 18, 19]. Marie Landry believes her fundamental right to provide depositions and have her account of events properly considered was denied, resulting in what she perceives as mistrials in all subsequent cases where she acted in self-defence [5, 6].

4 The Alleged False Witnesses

Marie Landry has identified several individuals whom she believes to be false witnesses [1-4]. These individuals, including Harry Geldart, Heather Saulnier, Patricia Scott, Natalya Beatty, Brandy McDonald, Marcel, James, RCMP Constable Gabriel Gallant, and RCMP Informant Tania Mallet, allegedly made indecent act and assault accusations that were ultimately withdrawn in court [1-4]. Marie Landry believes Gabriel Gallant and Tania Mallet participated in disinformation, telling these witnesses that they had won the case and that she was successfully convicted [1-4].

5 The Pursuit of Justice Through Mediation and Legal Action

Marie Landry is actively pursuing mediation to address the issues stemming from the initial error and to ensure such errors do not happen again [1-3, 3, 4, 4, 20]. This includes mediation efforts via the CHRC (Canadian Human Rights Commission) [1-4, 10, 13]. Her demands include correction of records to accurately reflect her legal gender (F) and pronouns (She/Her), and to rectify any discrepancies related to the charges against her [10, 13]. She also insists upon a public apology acknowledging the pain and discrimination endured [10, 13]. In acknowledgement of the suffering, she requests compensation in the amount of $50 million [10, 13]. Furthermore, she demands policy changes within the RCMP to address systemic issues related to transgender individuals and the LGBTQ+ community, aligning with the principles of Bill C-16 and the 2022 anti-conversion therapy bills [10, 13]. Mandatory LGBTQ+ training for RCMP members, jail guards, psychiatrists, and staff is also requested [10, 13].

Marie Landry has compiled a list of 56 charges currently under consideration against those believed responsible [1-4], encompassing a wide range of potential misconduct including defamation, discrimination, harassment, falsification of records, abuse of authority, failure to protect, obstruction of justice, violation of privacy, perjury, malicious prosecution, access to information violation, defamation of character, retaliation, mental anguish, public shaming, complicity, destruction of evidence, concealment of evidence, false arrest, violation of human rights, conduct unbecoming an officer, failure to investigate complaints, breach of duty, conduct prejudicial to good order, misrepresentation, constitutional violation, defacing character, invasion of privacy, abuse of process, interference with civil rights, obstruction of civil rights, suppression of evidence, official misconduct, violating duty of care, recklessness, violation of Charter Rights, conduct contrary to the public interest, ethical violation, conspiracy to commit defamation, conduct bringing discredit to the RCMP, failure to uphold the law, misuse of public funds, defamation of an organization, breach of duty of fair representation, witness tampering, conduct injurious to public confidence in the justice system, abuse of process through legal maneuvers, violation of whistleblower protection, psychological harm, violation of duty to provide accurate information, and failure to uphold professional standards.

Marie Landry requests a comprehensive review of her entire criminal record to rectify the persistent errors and injustices [1-4]. She has formally complained to the Canadian Human Rights Commission (CHRC) - Case #2023-0331 [1-4] and the Civilian Review and Complaints Commission for the RCMP (CRCC) - Case #2023-2623 [21-26]. She has requested the consolidation of all police investigative files from 2016 to 2023 into RCMP Public Complaint (PC) #2023-1281916, paired with the CRCC and CHRC investigations [5, 6].

6 The Anguish of Incarceration

Marie Landry reports being severely mistreated as a trans person while incarcerated [5, 6]. She describes very transphobic stays in Restigouche, George Dumont, and Moncton City Hospital psych wards, as well as time in Moncton holding cells and Shediak Medical Isolation Cell 113 [5, 6].

7 The Urgent Need for Review and Accountability

Marie Landry has requested the retrieval of essential documentation from her New Brunswick criminal record and psychiatric facilities relevant to Medical File: 918133331 [8, 9, 11, 12, 14, 15, 19]. She has made an Urgent Request for Review and Correction of Inaccurate Records to the Provincial Court of New Brunswick - Moncton, urging a thorough review of Case #33094001 [5, 6].

8 Conclusion

The extensive documentation reveals a disturbing pattern of systemic injustice and transphobic discrimination against Marie Seshat Landry, directly stemming from a fundamental administrative error that was neither promptly nor effectively rectified. The subsequent actions and inactions of the RCMP, coupled with the alleged harmful conduct of specific individuals, have led to years of profound personal, emotional, and reputational damage. Marie Landry's unwavering fight to have her record voided and nulled, and her pursuit of legal and mediation avenues, underscore the critical need for a comprehensive review, full accountability, and systemic reforms to prevent such egregious violations of rights from occurring again.
