Donald Trump
45th President of the United States

Dear Mr. Trump,

I write to you today as someone who has followed your actions and rhetoric closely, particularly your repeated incitements to violence and division. Let me be clear: Your behavior is unacceptable. You seem to revel in stirring the pot, using language that fuels chaos and hatred. It is clear to me that you are not concerned with the welfare of the people you claim to represent.

You speak as if you are the embodiment of strength, but your actions suggest something else entirely. You have no problem calling for others to act violently, but you yourself would never lift a finger. This is not strength; it's cowardice. You hide behind the words of others and take advantage of their vulnerability and willingness to follow your lead. This, Mr. Trump, is the behavior of a psychopath who derives their playbook from the most dangerous of dictators, willing to risk the lives of others for your own gain.

It's time for you to stop this nonsense. If you cannot engage in meaningful discourse and lead with integrity, then it's best you remain silent. The consequences of your words have been grave, and continuing down this path only undermines any semblance of the nation's progress.

Stop using your platform to stir violence and hatred. You may not care about the destruction you cause, but there are those of us who do, and we will not stand by in silence.

Sincerely,
Marie Seshat Landry
