Subject: Urgent Call for Reformation: Addressing Critical Issues Under Your Leadership

Dear Mayor Dawn Arnold,

I am writing to address a series of pressing concerns that have come to light regarding the management of poverty, drugs, homelessness, and crime in Moncton during your tenure as mayor. It is imperative to confront these issues head-on and acknowledge the shortcomings of the current administration in order to pave the way for meaningful change and progress.

Poverty and Economic Inequality

Under your leadership, Moncton has witnessed a troubling increase in poverty rates. Despite the growing wealth and opportunities within the city, the economic divide has widened, leaving many residents struggling to meet basic needs. Your administration's failure to implement effective economic policies and social support programs has exacerbated this issue. The lack of targeted initiatives to support low-income families and individuals has contributed to the widening gap between the affluent and the underprivileged. A comprehensive approach to economic development, job creation, and social services is urgently needed.

Drug Crisis Management

The drug crisis in Moncton has reached alarming levels, with a significant rise in substance abuse and related health issues. Your administration's response to this crisis has been inadequate, lacking a coordinated strategy for prevention, treatment, and harm reduction. The reliance on punitive measures rather than a public health approach has failed to address the root causes of addiction. It is crucial to shift focus toward comprehensive drug decriminalization and robust support systems for addiction recovery.

Homelessness and Shelter Provision

The homelessness crisis in Moncton has persisted with insufficient action taken to provide adequate emergency shelters and long-term solutions. The visible increase in homelessness and inadequate response to the needs of the homeless population reflect a critical failure in policy execution. The lack of strategic planning for emergency shelter provision and supportive housing has left many individuals without the basic human needs for safety and stability. Immediate action is needed to address this crisis effectively.

Rising Crime Rates

The rise in crime rates within the city has been a significant concern, with increasing reports of violence and property crimes. The current administration's approach to policing and crime prevention has proven ineffective in curbing this trend. The failure to implement meaningful reforms and invest in community-based crime prevention strategies has led to a growing sense of insecurity among residents. It is essential to reevaluate and enhance policing practices, focusing on community engagement, de-escalation techniques, and preventative measures.

Conclusion

In summary, the handling of these critical issues under your leadership has been marked by ineffective policies and insufficient action. The escalating problems of poverty, drug abuse, homelessness, and crime demand a fresh, proactive approach that prioritizes the well-being of all residents. I urge you to reassess your strategies and take decisive steps to address these challenges. It is time for a shift in leadership and policy to ensure a safer, more equitable, and prosperous future for Moncton.

Sincerely,

Marie Seshat Landry
