Abstract

This report documents Donald Trump's persistent and evolving attacks on transgender individuals—especially trans women—through policies, executive orders, public statements, and legal measures. It includes recent developments as of July 9, 2025, highlighting the widening impact across healthcare, education, civil rights, and federal enforcement mechanisms.

1 Executive Summary

Since resuming office in January 2025, President Trump has aggressively renewed efforts to reverse transgender rights. This includes executive orders banning gender self-ID, revoking gender-affirming care, targeting trans athletes, and prompting federal investigations that restrict services. These measures, coupled with broader state-level bans, have created a climate of escalating marginalization and institutional pressure.

2 Recent Federal Actions & Executive Orders

- Executive Order 14168 (Jan 20, 2025): Removes federal recognition of gender identity, ends federal funding for gender-affirming care, prohibits self-ID on passports, and mandates sex-defined facilities based on birth sex; currently under multiple legal challenges (en.wikipedia.org).
- Executive Order 14183 (Jan 27, 2025): Reinforces transgender military ban; reinstated by the Supreme Court despite ongoing legal review (en.wikipedia.org).
- Keeping Men Out of Women's Sports EO (Feb 5, 2025): Directs federal agencies to reinterpret Title IX restrictively (en.wikipedia.org).

3 Impact on Healthcare & Youth Care

- Federal actions have directly led to closures or reductions in transgender youth care at leading institutions (LA, Stanford, Pittsburgh) due to funding threats and investigations (HRC map, Axios report).
- The July 22, 2025, shutdown of the Center for Transyouth Health Development at Children’s Hospital LA sparked major protests (AP News).
- Human Rights Watch reports intensified damage from state-level bans (25+ states), with rising mental health and suicide risks among trans youth (HRW).

4 Education & Civil Rights

- University of Pennsylvania banned trans women athletes and erased records under federal pressure, complying with Department of Education enforcement (ABC News).
- California faced federal demands to bar trans athletes; the state refused, triggering a standoff over federal funding (LA Times).
- U.S. Supreme Court agreed to hear two major state cases (Idaho, West Virginia) on trans athlete bans for the 2025–26 term starting October 2025 (Reuters).

5 Broader Legislative Scope

- Over 575 anti-LGBTQ+ bills introduced in 2025: 54 enacted targeting healthcare bans, ID barriers, sports participation, and expression (them.us).
- ACLU maps continued rollbacks on gender-affirming care and ID laws across states (HRC map).
- Supreme Court’s ruling upholding Tennessee’s ban on trans care for minors (June 18, 2025) marks a significant legal setback (en.wikipedia.org).

6 Social Mobilization & Cultural Resistance

- Massive protests in Los Angeles over the LA trans youth clinic closure (The Guardian, AP News).
- “Liberation Weekend” music festival in Washington, D.C. (May 30–31, 2025) celebrated trans rights during Pride (Wikipedia).

7 Conclusion

Trump’s second term has unleashed a sweeping federal campaign targeting trans existence—from care access and legal recognition to sports and military inclusion. The resulting institutional pressure, fortified by state-level hostility and Supreme Court rulings, has led to an acute erosion of trans rights and escalating social strain. Ongoing resistance—legal, civil, and cultural—remains critical to safeguarding trans communities.
