Dear Marie Landry:

On behalf of Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, I would like to acknowledge receipt of your email of May 22, 2023.

Please be assured that your comments have been carefully reviewed. As you may know, the issue you raise falls within the portfolio of the Honourable Marco Mendicino, Minister of Public Safety, to whom I note you have also addressed your correspondence. While the Prime Minister appreciates the time you have taken to share your concerns, he will leave the matter to be considered by Minister Mendicino.

Thank you for writing.

Subject: Update on Ongoing Discrimination Case - Urgent Attention Required

Dear Prime Minister Trudeau and Minister Mendicino,

I am writing to bring to your attention a distressing and concerning situation involving the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) that has significantly impacted my life for the past seven years. It is imperative that you are aware of the various grounds for mediation and potential criminal charges, as well as the critical issue of transphobic treatment and the illegal practice of conversion therapy.

In January 2016, I, Marie Landry, was falsely accused of an indecent act. Despite the charge being dismissed in court in October 2016, the RCMP officer responsible for the case inaccurately recorded in the police file (2016-84414) that I was found guilty. This false information led to substantial harm to my reputation and well-being.

The grounds for mediation and potential legal action against the RCMP include:

1. Defamation: The dissemination of false information by the RCMP, damaging my personal and professional reputation.
2. Negligence: Failure to conduct a proper investigation and update their records, causing prolonged distress and harm.
3. Abuse of Process: Persisting in asserting false accusations, leading to emotional and psychological distress.
4. False Imprisonment: Unjust detention in a psychiatric ward based on false information, contributing to further harm and discrimination.
5. Invasion of Privacy: Violation of privacy rights through the dissemination of inaccurate and damaging information.
6. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress: The RCMP's actions have resulted in severe emotional suffering and distress.

7. Discrimination: Transphobic treatment and prejudice by the RCMP officers involved, perpetuating systemic injustice against transgender individuals.

In addition to these grounds for mediation, potential criminal charges against the involved officers may include:

1. Perjury: If it can be proven that the officers knowingly provided false information during court proceedings or the investigation.

2. Obstruction of Justice: If the officers deliberately acted to hinder the proper administration of justice.

3. Misconduct in Public Office: If the officers abused their power in a manner that constitutes misconduct.

Furthermore, it is important to note that the illegal practice of conversion therapy is an additional concern in this situation. The mistreatment and transphobic treatment experienced within psychiatric wards, specifically the Moncton Hospital, the George Dumont Hospital, and the Centre Hospitalier Restigouche, raise significant questions about the adherence to laws prohibiting conversion therapy.

This ordeal has persisted for seven long years, and to make matters worse, I was even taken for a drive by an RCMP officer who callously expressed that he did not care about what the judge said, stating that he knew, and the RCMP knew, that I was found guilty. This flagrant disregard for due process and the rights of individuals is deeply troubling and raises serious questions about the conduct and accountability of certain RCMP officers.

Given the gravity of these issues, I urge you to take immediate action to address the transphobic treatment, pursue accountability for those responsible, and ensure the enforcement of laws against conversion therapy. It is crucial to implement comprehensive reforms within the RCMP and the healthcare system to protect the rights and well-being of transgender individuals. Canadian Human Rights Commission Reference #100016045

Thank you for your attention to this urgent matter. I trust in your commitment to justice, equality, and the protection of human rights.

Sincerely,

Marie Landry
