

The Universal Declaration of WTFLOL

Preamble

Whereas existence is a chaotic patchwork of confusion, Whereas memes have become the lingua franca of humankind, Whereas humanity deserves equal access to laughter, cringe, and bewilderment, The People of the Internet, united in keyboard and chaos, Do hereby proclaim the Universal Declaration of WTFLOL, So that all beings may scroll in peace, post in freedom, and forever ask: “wtf lol?”

Articles

Article 1 – Equality of Bewilderment All people are born equally confused and shall remain so throughout life.

Article 2 – The Right to LOL No one shall be denied a hearty chuckle, awkward snort, or emoji-laden laughter chain.

Article 3 – Meme Sovereignty Every citizen has the right to create, share, and remix memes without censorship, unless said meme is objectively unfunny, in which case it shall still be protected but ridiculed.

Article 4 – Context Immunity Inside jokes require no explanation. “You had to be there” is recognized as valid testimony in all courts of law.

Article 5 – The Rage-Quit Clause Everyone may rage-quit games, chats, or life events at any time. Readmission requires only the phrase “lol nvm.”

Article 6 – The Sacred Right to Shitpost Even the lowest-effort shitpost deserves dignity. Quality is subjective; chaos is universal.

Article 7 – Sanctuary of Cat Content Whenever despair strikes, all persons shall have immediate and unrestricted access to cat videos, gifs, or images of cats wearing bread.

Article 8 – Keyboard Smash Protection asdfghjkl; qwertyuiop. This sacred practice shall not be censored, even when mistaken for hacking attempts.

Article 9 – Infinite Scrolling Citizens have the right to scroll infinitely, even unto 3 a.m., with no requirement to explain their browsing history.

Article 10 – Emoji Freedom Use of emojis shall never be limited by age, culture, or platform.

Article 11 – The GIF Provision All people may express emotions exclusively through GIFs, including but not limited to Michael Scott, Kermit sipping tea, and SpongeBob reactions.

Article 12 – Meme Credit Those who steal memes without credit will be judged in the Court of Public Ratio.

Article 13 – The Great Pun Protection Every pun, no matter how groan-worthy, shall be cherished as sacred text.

Article 14 – Caps Lock Liberty EVERYONE HAS THE RIGHT TO YELL IN CAPS WITHOUT CONSEQUENCE.

Article 15 – The Screenshot Guarantee All deleted messages are subject to the ancient law: “someone already screenshotted it.”

Article 16 – Shipping Rights All fandoms shall have the freedom to ship whomever they please, provided they are prepared to defend their choices in eternal comment wars.

Article 17 – No Scroll-Shaming One's algorithm-curated feed shall not be mocked. Whether cursed or blessed, the feed is personal.

Article 18 – Infinite Retry All typos, failed jokes, and awkward posts may be deleted and retried without shame.

Article 19 – The Right to Clownery Every person may engage in clownery, whether romantic, financial, or existential. 🤡

Article 20 – The Buffering Amnesty When streams buffer at critical moments, no individual shall be blamed. The lag monster is a recognized force of nature.

Article 21 – Holy Copypasta Protection Copypastas, whether cursed walls of text or glorious spam, shall remain eternal cultural artifacts.

Article 22 – Meme Evolution Memes may mutate, evolve, and become incomprehensible. This is not only permitted, but encouraged.

Article 23 – The LOL Legacy Each generation shall pass on the wisdom of WTFLOL to the next, ensuring humanity never takes itself too seriously.

Final Proclamation

In witness whereof, we, the citizens of WTFLOL, pledge to uphold these sacred articles. May confusion reign, memes flourish, and laughter echo eternally through the timeline.