

The Declaration of Independence of the Dominion of Canada

On the Occasion of Our Full Sovereignty and Unyielding Future

Marie Seshat Landry
www.marielandryceo.com

April 8, 2025

In the Name of the People of Canada

We, the sovereign and united peoples of the Dominion of Canada, representing all nations, cultures, and regions of this vast land, do hereby declare our independence from the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. This declaration is made with full acknowledgment of our shared history, respect for our past, and an unwavering commitment to our future as a free, self-governed nation.

Whereas

- For centuries, the peoples of this land have lived in harmony with the great expanse of nature and the diverse cultures that have called this land home;
- Whereas our forebearers, through sacrifice and struggle, forged a unique and thriving society built on the principles of democracy, equity, and respect for all peoples;
- Whereas the sovereignty of Canada has been, for many years, respected in practice, with increasing autonomy in governance and law, but our ties to the United Kingdom have remained symbolic and impractical to our full self-determination;
- Whereas the time has come for Canada to fully realize its own destiny, to govern itself without the constraints of any external influence, and to assume its rightful place as a full sovereign entity among the nations of the world;

- Whereas our shared belief in democracy, the rule of law, human rights, and environmental stewardship guides our path forward;
- Whereas, in accordance with the wishes of our citizens, Canada must be free to make its own decisions in all matters—be they domestic or international—without hesitation or limitation;

Now, Therefore, We, the People of Canada, in Full Assembly and with the Voice of the Collective Will, do Declare:

1. The Sovereign Nation of Canada:

Canada is and shall be a fully independent and sovereign nation, with the authority to govern its affairs, to control its economy, its environment, and its cultural identity, free from any political, legal, or economic influence from the United Kingdom or any other foreign power.

2. Full Control Over Governance and Law:

The Canadian government is hereby recognized as the sole and legitimate governing body of the people of Canada, with full authority over the creation, implementation, and interpretation of laws, policies, and treaties. The Canadian Parliament, the judiciary, and the executive branches of government are solely responsible for ensuring the protection and advancement of Canadian sovereignty.

3. Equality with the Nations of the World:

Canada, as a free and independent nation, will establish diplomatic relations, enter into treaties, and participate in international organizations on the basis of equality and mutual respect, in line with the values of peace, cooperation, and sustainability.

4. Protection of Canada's Future Generations:

Canada shall implement policies, environmental practices, and economic models that secure the well-being of all its citizens, ensuring a prosperous, sustainable, and peaceful future for generations to come.

5. Inalienable Rights of the People:

The people of Canada, in their diversity and strength, shall retain inalienable rights to self-determination, peace, and liberty, to which no external entity may lay claim or restrict.

In witness whereof, this Declaration is proclaimed on this day, the 8th of April, 2025, by the undersigned, on behalf of all people and nations that call Canada their home.

Marie Seshat Landry

Founder of the Universal Declaration of Organic Rights (UDOR)

www.marielandryceo.com