

THE WRITTEN CONSTITUTION

OF THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND

"Founded upon the principles of liberty, the rule of law, and the shared heritage of four nations, this document serves as the final authority on the governance of the Union."

Article I: Fundamental Rights

1.1 The European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) is hereby incorporated into the text of this Constitution and cannot be repealed by ordinary legislative act.

1.2 The right to strike and the right to peaceful assembly are fundamental pillars of the British democratic tradition and shall not be unlawfully restricted.

Article II: Separation of Powers

2.1 The Judiciary is entirely independent. The Supreme Court of the United Kingdom has the power of "Constitutional Review" to strike down laws that violate this document.

2.2 Executive powers are derived solely from this Constitution and are subject to the constant oversight of Parliament.

Article III: The Devolved Settlement

3.1 The United Kingdom is a voluntary Union. The right of the constituent nations to determine their own future via democratic referendum is recognized as a constitutional principle.
