

Universal Declaration Against Toxic Pollution

Preamble

Recognizing the intrinsic value of a healthy environment and the universal right to clean air, water, and soil, we affirm the need to protect our world from the dangers of toxic pollution.

Article 1: Right to a Healthy Environment

Every individual is entitled to live in a healthy environment free from toxic pollutants that endanger health, well-being, and ecological balance.

Article 2: Prevention and Reduction

Governments and industries must adopt preventative measures and cleaner technologies to minimize the generation and release of toxic pollutants.

Article 3: Responsible Management

Ensure safe and sustainable management of toxic substances and waste, prioritizing reduction, reuse, and recycling to minimize environmental impact.

Article 4: Public Participation and Access to Information

Citizens have the right to be informed about toxic pollution, participate in decision-making processes, and access justice in environmental matters.

Article 5: Restoration and Remediation

Commit to restoring and rehabilitating environments affected by toxic pollution, ensuring ecosystems are returned to their natural state, wherever possible.

Conclusion

This declaration calls upon global cooperation to combat toxic pollution, emphasizing the need for action at all levels of society to safeguard the planet for future generations.
