
Universal Declaration of Hemp Rights

Preamble:

Recognizing the versatility, sustainability, and myriad uses of hemp across cultures and industries, and acknowledging the plant's potential in contributing to environmental sustainability, economic development, and social well-being. Conscious of the need to address past restrictions and promote a future where hemp's full potential is realized for the betterment of humanity and the planet, we hereby establish this Universal Declaration of Hemp Rights.

Article 1: Right to Cultivate and Utilize Hemp

Every individual and community has the inherent right to cultivate and utilize hemp for industrial, medicinal, nutritional, and ecological purposes, in accordance with sustainable practices.

Article 2: Right to Research and Innovate

Researchers, farmers, entrepreneurs, and institutions have the right to conduct research on hemp, exploring its potential applications in medicine, technology, agriculture, and other fields, encouraging innovation and knowledge sharing.

Article 3: Right to Fair Trade and Market Access

Individuals and enterprises engaged in the hemp industry have the right to fair trade and equitable market access, ensuring that small-scale farmers and marginalized communities benefit from hemp cultivation and trade.

Article 4: Right to Environmental Stewardship

Acknowledging hemp's role in soil regeneration, biodiversity preservation, and carbon sequestration, all stakeholders have the duty to promote environmentally sustainable cultivation and processing practices that protect the planet.

Article 5: Right to Education and Information

The public has the right to access accurate and comprehensive information about hemp, including its benefits, uses, and sustainable practices, fostering an informed society that can make educated decisions regarding hemp.

Article 6: Right to Legal Clarity and Support

Governments and regulatory bodies must provide clear, supportive legal frameworks for the cultivation, processing, distribution, and use of hemp, removing unnecessary barriers and supporting the industry's development.

Article 7: Right to Non-Discrimination

No individual or community shall face discrimination based on their involvement in the hemp industry. This includes equal access to resources, financial services, and support programs.

Article 8: Right to Cultural Expression

Communities and individuals have the right to use hemp in traditional, cultural, and religious practices, recognizing hemp's historical significance and cultural value across different societies.

Article 9: Right to Participate in Policy Making

Stakeholders in the hemp industry, including farmers, businesses, environmental groups, and indigenous communities, have the right to participate in policy-making processes that affect the hemp sector, ensuring their voices are heard and interests represented.

Article 10: Right to Global Cooperation

Promoting global cooperation in the hemp industry is essential for addressing cross-border challenges, sharing best practices, and supporting the sustainable development of the hemp sector worldwide.

Conclusion:

This Universal Declaration of Hemp Rights establishes a common standard for recognizing and upholding the rights associated with the cultivation, research, and utilization of hemp. It invites all members of the international community to work together towards a future where hemp contributes to sustainable development, economic prosperity, and environmental health.

2024 Marie Seshat Landry