

Universal Declaration of the Right to Break, Protest, and Change Unjust Laws

Preamble

Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice, and peace in the world;

Whereas disregard and contempt for human rights have resulted in barbarous acts which have outraged the conscience of mankind, and the advent of a world in which human beings shall enjoy freedom of speech and belief, freedom from fear and want has been proclaimed as the highest aspiration of common people;

Whereas it is essential to promote the development of friendly relations between nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;

Whereas it is essential to encourage the maintenance of peace, and to declare and establish, through this Declaration, the right of every individual, community, and society to protest against, seek the amendment of, and, if necessary, break unjust laws that infringe upon human rights and fundamental freedoms;

Now, therefore, we proclaim The Universal Declaration of the Right to Break, Protest, and Change Unjust Laws as a common standard for all peoples and all nations, to the end that every individual and every organ of society, keeping this Declaration constantly in mind, shall strive by teaching and education to promote respect for these rights and freedoms, and by progressive measures, national and international, to secure their universal and effective recognition and observance, both among the peoples of Member States themselves and among the peoples of territories under their jurisdiction.

Article 1: Right to Identify and Challenge Unjust Laws

Every human being has the inherent right to identify laws that unjustly infringe upon human rights and to voice opposition to such laws through peaceful protest and legal challenges.

Article 2: Right to Peaceful Protest

Every individual, community, and organization has the right to organize, participate in, and conduct peaceful protests against unjust laws, without fear of persecution, retaliation, or suppression.

Article 3: Right to Legal Challenge and Reform

Individuals and collectives have the right to seek the amendment or abolition of unjust laws through legal channels, advocating for legislation that upholds the principles of justice, equality, and human dignity.

Article 4: Protection from Retaliation

No one exercising their rights under this Declaration shall be subjected to any form of retaliation, including but not limited to harassment, violence, unjust arrest, or legal persecution.

Article 5: International Cooperation

States shall cooperate in promoting and respecting the principles outlined in this Declaration, providing mutual support in the pursuit of reforming unjust laws, and ensuring the protection of those engaged in such efforts.

Conclusion

This Declaration sets forth the inalienable rights to protest, challenge, and seek the change of unjust laws as fundamental human rights essential to the preservation of freedom, justice, and peace in the world. It calls upon individuals, communities, and nations to respect and protect these rights, and to work collaboratively towards a world where justice prevails, and the dignity and rights of all humans are upheld.